

Your life - your priorities

The following questions shall help and support you to figure out if playing guitar is really a high priority in your life in order to practice regularly.
Do you have too many other interests in your life or does playing guitar stand above all?

The questions below are dealing with this topic.
Answer these questions for yourself.

Take some time to answer the questions. (Some people might need 20 minutes, others might spend one day or even longer with this task.)
You can and should come back to this worksheet from time to time to check if maybe your priorities changed in the meantime. Maybe you do this every three months.
For now I want to present two possibilities how to work with this worksheet:

Possibility 1: Start right now with answering the questions.

Possibility 2: Determine a date when you will answer the questions - and you have to stick to this date.

Do not postpone it indefinitely.

You can write down as much as you want regarding every question. If you do not have enough space here, just get another sheet of paper before stopping or shortening your answers because lack of space.

The replies to these questions are only for you!
(If you like, you are welcome to share your replies with me. But actually it is important that you answer these questions for yourself and that things become clearer for you.)

At the end of the worksheet you find the procedure how to check your answers and how to find out if playing guitar really has a high priority in your life.

Just one more thing before you start with the questionnaire:

Maybe you are asking yourself how these questions are related to the topic of playing guitar. The questions are consciously kept generally. And after replying to the questions you will be more aware what priority playing guitar really has in your life. Furthermore the questions are also a bit philosophical. Musicians can also just busy themselves with this while taking a walk in the park to collect or brainstorm new ideas for their songs.

Enjoy answering these questions!
I wish you all the best and a lot of great experiences!
